

Konstantinos Karachalios

Scenarios Analyst, Public Policy Issues, European Patent Office

Konstantinos Karachalios was born in Athens in 1954.

He gained a PhD in Physics and Engineering on "Nuclear Reactor Safety".

He works at the European Patent Office in the field of external relations and is co-author of the work Scenarios for the Future.

His publications deal with the topics of culture, politics, science and technology, and his most recent titles are Managing Science: Is the Cudos Still in Place ? (Biotechnology Journal, 2008, 3) and Re-discovering the Sunken Horizons: Governance Gaps in the Global Knowledge Economy and the Role of Institutions (Key Note Speech to CFP Conference, Yale, May 2008).