

Title:

From managing books to managing ideas: the role of libraries in accelerating institutional progress

By Derek Law

Abstract:

Considers the dramatic technological and societal changes which have affected libraries in recent decades and explores the challenges now facing them to prove their value, within that turbulent external environment. Argues that the future lies in moving from managing book collections to managing the intellectual output of the institution.

Session:

Visualizing library and information services assets: from intellectual property to intellectual capital